Be ready for messy situations

OSHA Standards for Bloodborne Pathogens (BBP, 29 CFR 1910.1030) and Personal Protective Equipment (PPE, 29 CFR 1910 Subpart I) require employers to protect workers from occupational exposure to infectious diseases. Providing for the proper handling of bloodborne pathogens (BBP) or bodily fluid incidents should be a part of your safety program.

When to Use Bodily Spill Kit vs. Bloodborne Pathogen Kit

When a spill occurs in the workplace, there are different options for what is needed and used to clean up the spill. If the spill involves blood or other potentially infectious material the employer will need to provide all the supplies as defined by OSHA for their task.

Bodily Fluid Spill Kit

Bodily Fluid Spill Clean Up Kits include tools to clean up bodily fluid spills and aid in the compliance with OSHA regulations for Bloodborne Pathogen clean up. This kit will have minimal personal protection, as there would be no risk of exposure.

A Bodily Fluid Spill Clean Up Kit should be used when there is no potential blood or other potentially infectious materials in the spill.

Bloodborne Pathogen Spill Kit

Bloodborne Pathogen Spill Clean Up Kits include the spill clean-up tools and appropriate personal protection needed to clean up and dispose of blood or other potentially infectious materials (OPIM).

The level of personal protection included in a Bloodborne Pathogen Kit will depend on the task that could be expected in the workplace. It is the employer's responsibility to provide PPE that is appropriate to complete the task and keep the employee safe from exposure.
