Be Prepared for Burns in High-Risk
and Remote Areas

Respond to Burn Emergencies at the scene – especially higher-risk areas where arc flash, electrical contact, explosions, flames, high heat material, liquid and steam can occur.

Did You Know?

Five to 10 arc flash explosions occur in electric equipment every day in the United States.
This number does not include cases in which the victim is sent to an ordinary hospital.
Instead, these incidents are so severe the victims require treatment from a special burn center.

Understanding Bleeding Control Kit Tools Can Save a Life

Bleeding Control kits come with a number of life saving tools to help a bystander control a traumatic bleeding event until professional help arrives.

Windlass Tourniquet
First Aid Only 91160

A tourniquet is used to stop severe bleeding on an arm or leg when direct pressure alone does not. A tourniquet is wrapped around the limb above the wound and tightened to restrict blood flow.

Some tourniquets like the First Aid Only QuickTight Tourniquet have a built-in windlass wand that is twisted to cut off blood flow quickly and then clipped into a clasp.

Vented Chest Seal
First Aid Only 91194

A chest seal covers a lung puncture wound and allows the lung to continue to function. Vented chest seals have channels to allow excess air trapped in the chest cavity to vent out while also preventing air from the outside from being sucked into the chest cavity.

The chest seal is coated with a thick gel to adhere to a victim's chest without interference from hair or moisture.

Hemostatic Gauze Pad
First Aid Only 91196

A hemostatic gauze pad is ideal to stop bleeding on areas of the body where you cannot apply a tourniquet like the torso, groin or neck.

The pad is designed to promote rapid blood coagulation on an extreme bleeding wound. The pad is treated with an agent that absorbs the water in blood allowing the clotting factors to form a clot over the wound quickly.

Israeli Bandage
First Aid Only 91152

The Israeli bandage is a combination primary dressing and pressure applicator for bleeding wounds.

It has a sterile non-adherent pad attached on a sturdy but stretchable 4" wide fabric wrap with a built-in pressure applicator bar. As the wrap is fed through the pressure applicator bar and pulled tight, the bar puts direct pressure on the wound restricting blood flow.

Most Kits Come With a Few Standard Items:

- Nitrile gloves to both protect the bystander and to help keep the wound from becoming infected
- Gauze can be used to both absorb blood and put pressure on the wound
- Shears to cut gauze or cut away clothing
- A marker to note the time a tourniquet was applied on a limb wound
